"Better conditions for Southern forms," was the subject of an address by Dr Seamon A. Knapp, of Lake Charles, La., special agent United States Department of Agriculture. Dr. Knapp spoke of the advantages to be derived by the farmers in developing the soil, and in this manner increasing the output of their acreage.

Other speakers were T. O. Sandy, Farmville, Va.; E. McIver Williamson, Montelair, S. C., and Dr. L. H. Balley, professor of agriculture in Cornell University. Mr. Knapp said: Riveted With Gold.

"The large body of freedmen set-tled throughout the rural districts of the South has tended to lower farm the South has tended to lower farm values and depress agriculture. The effect is not the result of color, but is caused by the lower plane of living. We have lived under a slavery where the chains are ingeniously forged and the bands riveted with gold. It is all the same in effect, the impoverishment of the masses."

Dr. Knapp declared that the national banking law has caused a depressing influence by diverting most of the al banking law has caused a depressing influence by diverting most of the money of the country into commercial channels. He advocated the establishmment of agricultural banks throughout the South to provide money for farmers to harvest their crops and to improve their farms.

"The banking capital of our country," he said, "has stimulated commercialism, and by its concentration in the cities has fostered gambling in stocks. The great fluctuation in the values of farms and farm products lies in the fact that the money of the country has been loaned to the speculative interests."

This involuntary immersionist, having, on some previous baptismal occasion, made (it is said) a remark reflecting on immersion as a mode of baptism, was, for the moment of her mishap, regarded by some as a subject of retributive justice, but all merriment was promptly hushed when it was ascertained that the accident gave her such a nervous shock as to require the attention of a physician. The sedatives administered, however, quickly restored her to normal conditions, and her conviction was strengthened that immersion was at least one mode of baptism, and that candidates for the rite should have timely notice.

This young lady, unusually fine-looking, an excellent student, was most handsomely and tastefully dressed on the occasion of her plunge.
